There is a growing acknowledgment of the vital importance dental health plays on the overall well-being of a patient. The mouth and teeth are connected to the body, organ, and systems, in many significant ways. Experts have now mapped how dental infections and problems are interrelated to specific organs/systems.

DID YOU KNOW?

The teeth and heart are closely related. Inflammation caused by plaque (bacteria around the teeth) may lead to bacteria and plaque in the arteries of the heart.

L.I. = Large Intestine
G.B. = Gallbladder